

MASTER ANGLER

In-Fisherman's Master Angler Awards Program, now in its 37th year of awarding North America's best anglers for outstanding catches, has been successfully incorporated with our website, in-fisherman.com, and the system is working fine. Many readers are accustomed to submitting forms by mail, and we continue to welcome applications in either medium.

Applications were down somewhat this year, but catches of huge fish were spectacular as usual. For the first time, trophy-size largemouth bass headed the list, with 61, followed by smallmouth bass (56). In-Fisherman readers tallied some massive largemouth bass. Consider Jay Mather's 27-incher from a New York pond and a 26-incher from Lake Annabessacook in Maine. Stephen Lavane's 27½-incher from Florida was largest. Walleye totals were the lowest ever and no true giants emerged, with the largest measuring just over 33 inches, from the Columbia River, Oregon. Believe it or not, we granted as many awards for muskie as for walleye! Two pike over 50 inches topped that list, both from Alaska.

We also saw a bump in salmon catches, particularly in the Great Lakes, and captains have said the action is as good or better than ever, and size outstanding. Consider that the five largest Great Lakes Chinook salmon came from the Salmon River in New York, all over 40 inches long.

Catfish results also were great, with two flatheads over 50 inches, one from Powerton Lake, Illinois, the other from the Susquehanna River in New York. Two blue cats also exceeded that mark, with Sgt. Bradley Wilson's 53½-incher from the Missouri River in Missouri, taking top prize, edging a 52-incher from the Mississippi River in Missouri. For panfish, some giant redear sunfish stand out—Bob Dippery Sr.'s fish from the Mohawk Canal in Arizona, just under 14 inches, and Gary Harmon's 13½-incher from Virginia.

The 2012 Master Angler Awards Program is underway. Catch a lunger, check size requirements, and fill out applications found in In-Fisherman magazine or at in-fisherman.com. As in the past, you can check all entries and see lots more fine fish photos on our website.
